Decision Making in Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) Use in Construction Projects-Chia Kuang Lee 2017 Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) is prominent in managing disputes in construction projects. Despite the many positive attributes of ADR, previous studies have discovered that both the appreciation and the actual practice of ADR are disappointingly low, as evidenced by the context of the Malaysian construction industry. Although the literature related to ADR has been growing over the past 30 years and gaining impetus since the mid-1980s, the decision-making process in ADR still remains relatively unknown and under-explored. The current study is the first to develop and test an ADR intervention framework to intervene in the use of ADR in the Malaysian construction industry. To address this gap, the main objectives of this doctoral study are fourfold: (1) to perform a systematic review on the factors influencing ADR selection and use, (2) to develop and test an ADR decision-making behavioural model, (3) to determine the factors predicting a decision to use ADR, and (4) to develop and test an ADR intervention framework. To achieve these objectives, a multimethod design study was adopted. The research first addressed objective 1 by systematically reviewing 446 articles from 21 construction-related journals. The synthesized factors influencing ADR selection and use were found to be fragmented and overemphasizing utility grounds. The relationship between the factors was never empirically established and tested. However, these factors were found to fit the dimensions of the Theory of Planned Behaviour (TPB), model, which offer a plausible development of an ADR decision-making behavioural framework. To fully address objective 2 of the study, the TPB framework was integrated with and extended by other behavioural theories. In between, a focus group was utilised and a mediation study was conducted to reaffirm the robustness of the conceptual model. Following that, 128 respondents specialising in Building and Civil Engineering works were recruited to test the model. The data was then analysed by using Partial Least Squares-Structural Equation Modelling (PLS-SEM). To address objective 3, the ADR decision-making behavioural model was examined. The findings showed that attitude (ATT), importance (IMP), and perceived relative advantage (PA) and perceived ease of use (PE) are the significant predictors of attitude (ATT). The findings were used as the basis to address the subsequent objective 4. Six construction professionals were interviewed and these validated the importance of these variables. Drawing on both qualitative and quantitative findings, an intervention framework was then developed. Both normative pressures (NP) and trust (TR) were conceptualised and shown to be effective macro forces that influence the decision-making process. The framework has high predictive accuracy and predictive relevance. The contributions of this study are threefold. Firstly, the study progresses and advances theories in ADR selection behaviour through the refinement of existing theories. Secondly, this chapter pioneers a decision-making model through a robust theoretical approach. The findings show that the dynamics of decision-making in ADR use actually follow a reasoned process. Thirdly, the study develops an intervention framework and demonstrates how micro conditions can be influenced by macro forces. The outcome of this research is to provide a new and unique model that captures and extends behavioural and decision-making theories in ADR use in a holistic manner. The results offer practical premises for future interventions in which both the decision-making behavioural model and the intervention framework can be used as possible means to increase and enhance ADR use.

Professional Negligence Litigation in Practice-City Law School 2010 Professional Negligence Litigation in Practice has been specially written to provide students with a detailed introduction to the complex legal issues surrounding professional negligence disputes. Concentrating on two specific areas of professional negligence; clinical negligence and solicitors' negligence, this manual examines and provides practical guidance on how such a case might be most effectively prepared and presented. Split into five distinct parts; the first part of the manual covers selected areas of the substantive law as it relates to professional negligence cases, building on students' existing knowledge of the Civil Procedural Rules and examining the pre-action protocols and the role of the case management conference. Part III reflects the pragmatic approach adopted by the manual, and has been specifically designed to develop students' drafting skills to the advanced level of professional negligence. The final part of the manual focuses on providing students with an introduction to the key people and bodies whom they will commonly encounter in this area of practice. It also provides consideration of the availability and impact of funding arrangements on professional negligence cases and alternative dispute resolution. This manual will be an invaluable guide for students wishing to practice in civil common law chambers, particularly in the areas of professional negligence or personal injury.

Drafting Contracts in Legal English-Cynthia M. Adams 2014-12-09 Written in a deliberate and concise manner, devoid of United States colloquialisms, Drafting Contracts in Legal English: Cross-border Agreements Government, business law is designed for classroom use as well as self-study. Teaching a strategic approach and sequential steps to drafting contracts, the text includes examples and exercises based on cross-border agreements such as distribution agreements, licensing, franchises and equipment leases. Special drafting issues in cross-border agreements are also considered: choice of language clauses, choice of law clauses, indemnification provisions, arbitration clauses and counterparty clauses, international alternative dispute resolution clauses, and the choice to opt in or out of the CISG. By providing appropriate explanations of United States law, the text increases student comprehension as suggested drafting approaches are placed in legal context. This unique guide discusses the purpose of and provides practical tips for contracts used in the organization and formatting, basic contract provisions, letters of intent, and the craft of reviewing and revising contracts. End-of-chapter exercises test overall comprehension and apply drafting concepts presented in the chapter. To increase the non-native speakers lexical range, vocabulary is derived from a statistical analysis of thousands of authentic contracts. To help with contract sentence structures that are challenging for non-native speakers, syntactic structures are based on comparison to databases with authentic contracts. A glossary of contract terms is based on frequency counts from thousands of authentic contracts and usage in text, contextualized and cross-referenced with most common collocations.

Virginia Real Estate License Exam Prep: All-in-One Review and Testing to Pass Virginia’s PSI Real Estate Exam-Stephen Mettling 2020-12-18 Features of Virginia Real Estate License Exam Prep (VA-RELEP) - National Principles & Law Key Point Review (60 pages) - Real Estate Math Key Formula Review & Practice (20 pages) - Virginia-Specific Laws and Practices (36 pages) - National Practice Tests (500 questions) - Virginia Practice Tests (125 questions) - Virginia Sample Exam (100 questions) We know the real estate licensing exam can be tough, and very nerve-wracking to prepare for. That’s why we created Virginia Real Estate License Exam Prep (VA-RELEP) the way we did it, as a resource for helping you manage your time, organizing your schedule for learning, and managing real estate schools and developing curriculum for forty years, we know how all this works – or fails to work. VA-RELEP is comprehensive in that it contains both key content review and testing practice. And the test review is Virginia-specific – not just simplistic national content, but terse, relevant and accurate Virginia laws and regulations presented as a well-organized set of state questions / reviewers’ ideas / national practice. But let’s not dismiss the importance of the national content either. VA-RELEP’s national key point reviews are a succinct compression of tested national principles and practices that comprise the national portion of state license exams from coast to coast. Our content is drawn from our own national textbook, Principles of Real Estate Practice – one of the most widely used principles textbooks in the country. Finally, our national content, as well as our question selection, is further tailored to the state testing outline promulgated by PSI for Virginia. Thus the breadth and depth of the law reviews and test questions reflect the topic emphasis of your state’s testing service and your Virginia license exam. A word about the test questions... VA-RELEP’s testing practice section consists of ten national practice tests, five state practice tests, and one state exam sample test. The practice tests are roughly 50 questions in length and the sample test is 100 questions. The test questions are designed to cover the content covered by the law reviews – which reinforces your learning of the total body of information tested by your state exam. The questions are direct, to the point, and designed to test your understanding of the test topics. In other words, if you are presented a given test, you can check your answers against the answer key in the appendix. You may also note that each question’s answer is accompanied by a brief explanation, or “rationale” to further reinforce your understanding. In the end, as you know, it’s all up to you. Unlike other publications, we are not going to tell you that using this book will guarantee that you pass your state exam. It still takes hard work and study to pass. But we have done our best here to get you ready. Following that, the most we can do is wish you the best of success in taking and passing your Virginia real estate exam. So good luck!!

In the Interests of Justice-Deborah L. Rhode 2003-04-10 Two thousand years ago, Seneca described advocates not as seekers of truth but as accessories to injustice, “smothered by their prosperity.” This unflattering assessment has only worsened over time. The vast majority of Americans now perceive lawyers as arrogant, unaffordable hired guns whose ethical practices rank just slightly above those of used car salesmen. In this penetrating new book, Deborah L. Rhode goes beyond the commonplace attacks on lawyers to provide the first systematic study of the structural problems confronting the legal profession. A past president of the Association of American Law Schools and senior counsel for the House Judiciary Committee during Clinton’s impeachment proceedings, Rhode brings an insider’s knowledge to the labyrinthine world of how the law works, or fails to work, for most Americans and often for lawyers themselves. She sheds much light on problems with the adversary system, the commercialization of practice, bar disciplinary processes, race and gender bias, and legal education. She argues convincingly that the bar’s current self-regulation must be replaced by oversight structures that would put the public’s interests above those of the profession. She insists that legal education become more flexible, by offering less expensive degree programs that would prepare paralegals to provide much needed low cost assistance. Most important, she calls for a return to ethical standards that put public service above economic self-interest. Elegantly written and Alternative Dispute Resolution—Alfred Fadijo 2013-03-04 This book highlights the tremendous shift in the traditional arrangements for the delivery of civil justice in the Commonwealth Caribbean, from litigation to alternative dispute resolution (ADR) processes. Over the last quarter of a century, much learning has taken place on the topic of ADR and the literature on the subject is now voluminous. This book puts forward the thesis that the peculiar experiences of the developing world ought to help reshape our traditional notions of ADR. Furthermore, the impact of globalisation on the developing world has brought with it special and peculiar challenges to our notions of civil and criminal justice which are not replicated elsewhere. This book will appeal to a wide readership. The legal profession, students of law and politics, social scientists, mediators, the police, state officers and the public at large will find its contents of interest.

Alternative Dispute Resolution and Peace-building in Africa—Ernest Uwazie 2014-06-26 Conflicts in Africa have a great deal in common, and striking parallels can be drawn between them at all levels. Dynamics affecting the most complex war-time conflicts, civil unrest and other macro disputes are in play even in the smallest community conflicts. The converse is also true: lessons learned through community mediation, for example in South Africa, are applicable to the most complex and largest conflicts to be found on the continent. Together, the eleven chapters in this publication, in addition to the prologue and epilogue, suggest that a comprehensive assessment of efforts and investments in conflict resolution and peace studies in Africa since the mid-1990s is due in order to identify lessons and challenges, as well as best practices. Just as conflict dynamics are comparable between African conflicts, whether large or small, local or international, so are alternative dispute resolution processes. Effective approaches to resolving large-scale conflicts and civil wars are effective at the community level, and ineffectual techniques at the community level are just as likely to be counter-productive in mediating international disputes. While there may be some differences in mediating macro- and micro-conflicts (such as the time required, the need for negotiation teams, and the complexities of agenda development or pre-negotiations), as far as the mediation process is concerned, the differences are more like variations on a theme than real substantive dissimilarities. This volume provides case studies of programs and policies, and legislations on alternative dispute resolution and peace building, and examines and proposes some new, promising ideas for conflict prevention, as well as maintenance of peace, justice and security in Africa.

A Practical Approach to Alternative Dispute Resolution—Susan Blake 2014 A Practical Approach to Alternative Dispute Resolution provides a comprehensive and easily digestible commentary on all the major areas of ADR. Designed to support teaching and learning on the Bar Professional Training Course, it will also be of interest to practitioners who are looking for a clear exposition of the range of ADR processes. Written by an authoritative and highly respected author team, A Practical Approach to Alternative Dispute Resolution contains a range of features designed to enhance the reader's understanding of the key points, including sample documentation, flow diagrams, tables, and examples drawn from a range of different types of practice. Numerous cross-references to relevant websites and further resources are also provided. This second edition has been brought fully up to date on current practice and issues affecting ADR, including the development of the role of the Civil Mediation Council, online ADR options, and the forthcoming implementation of the Jackson Review reforms. The book's expanded coverage also makes it a suitable text for LLM courses on ADR. Engineering Within Ecological Constraints—National Academy of Engineering 1996-03-22 Engineering within Ecological Constraints presents a rare dialogue between engineers and environmental scientists as they consider the many technical as well as social and legal challenges of ecologically sensitive engineering. The volume looks at the concepts of scale, resilience, and chaos as they apply to the points where the ecological life support system of nature interacts with the technological life support system created by humankind. Among the questions addressed are: What are the implications of differences between ecological and engineering concepts of efficiency and stability? How can engineering solutions to immediate problems be made compatible with long-term ecological concerns? How can we transfer ecological principles to economic systems? The book also includes important case studies on such topics as water management in southern California and oil exploration in rain forests. From its conceptual discussions to the practical experience reflected in case studies, this volume will be important to policymakers, practitioners, researchers, educators, and students in the fields of engineering, environmental science, and environmental policy.

Alternative Dispute Resolution in Civil Justice Systems—Roger E. Hartley 2002 Hartley examines the introduction of alternative dispute resolution (e.g., mediation) in a court system in Georgia. Attorneys supported the introduction of mediation to consolidate control of the legal process and to add it to their practices. They also used mediation to settle some cases more quickly. Mediation gave judges flexibility to weed out minor cases and process others more quickly. However, these changes were not so great as to put a dent in settlement or trial rates, and Hartley concludes that while changes in court procedures have effects, researchers need to examine the behavior of actors in depth in order to discover these effects.

Expanding knowledge in criminal justice—Ronnie Mills 1984
